TRAINING - WHEN AND WHERE YOU WANT IT

In a competitive marketplace, it is important to differentiate yourself from your competition. Education is one way to accomplish this, but when business is good, it's hard to find the time, and when business is not good, it's hard to justify the expense. Successful businesses know, however, that investing in yourself, and your business, can yield big results.

NWFA offers a variety of programs to meet the education and training needs of the entire wood flooring supply chain - contractors, distributors, retailers, importer/exporters, manufacturers, inspectors, and more. Take a look to see how NWFA education and training programs can help grow your industry knowledge, your hands-on skills, your professional network, and your bottom line.

CERTIFICATION TESTING

Validate your wood flooring knowledge and expertise. Certification exams are offered at Certification testing sites, and at all Intermediate level schools.

As an NWFA Certified Installer and/or Sand & Finisher, you'll have the education and skill set to establish yourself as a continuous learner and give your customers confidence that they are hiring a trustworthy professional. Register for certification testing at any intermediate school or testing site.
